A Conversation About Design and Health

Lisa Creighton is the Director of Housing at the Center for Active Design (CfAD). CfAD's housing program uses active design as a tool to achieve measurable health benefits among residents and promotes these strategies as standard practice in housing development. In her previous roles with the Partnership for a Healthier America, National Education Association, and the National League of Cities, Ms. Creighton has devoted nearly a decade to making progress toward improving community health within the municipal, education, and private sectors. Ms. Creighton holds Master of Public Health and Master of Business Administration in Health Policy and Management degrees from Johns Hopkins University and a Bachelor of Arts degree in Psychology from New York University.

Elizabeth Zeldin is a Senior Program Director in the New York City Office of Enterprise Community Partners, Inc. At Enterprise, Ms. Zeldin leads a team that focuses on neighborhood-targeted community development, weaving affordable housing preservation with capacity building, green housing, resilience, and health. Ms. Zeldin started at Enterprise in 2007 as a lending program officer. Prior to joining Enterprise, Ms. Zeldin worked at the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development, HR&A Advisors, New York City Independent Budget Office, and other organizations. Ms. Zeldin holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in Economics from Rutgers University and a Master of Arts degree in Economics from New York University.
